12 Etudes Elegantes

de Style et de Mecanisme pour Piano Op. 30.

EXTRACTS from some of the TESTIMONIALS received by the Composer, from eminent Professors and Composers.

"I have looked at your new collection of Etudes again and again with the greatest interest and it gives me real pleasure to communicate to you my appreciation of the same. These twelve characteristic pieces, all of them excellent practice, form by their refined and correct style one of the best collections of its kind and fully justifies the title of Etudes Elegantes. Your collection will certainly occupy a prominent place by the side of the most esteemed works of the Modern School of Pianoforte. I can predict a great success and I will contribute to it by adopting in my class these melodious and brilliant studies which offer to the pupils such attractive practice and which will hasten their progress and form their taste."—A. Marmontel, Professor of Pianoforte at the Conservatoire Paris.

"I have examined and re-examined your twelve Etudes. They are most interesting and admirably written for the instrument and—a promise I rarely make—I will place them in the hands of my pupils and professors of my class."—Felix Le Couppey, Professor of Pianoforte at the Conservatoire Paris.

"I desire to express the great pleasure the reading of your studies has given me, they combine charm, melody and ingenuity of mechanism. To the great success to which they are called I shall use my best endeavours to contribute."—Mme. A. Massart, Professor of Pianoforte at the Conservatoire Paris.

"I wish to send you my congratulations on your Etudes Elégantes which will obtain without any doubt a great success. The ideas are charming and well treated, besides which each has a clearly defined object which will facilitate the progress of the young pianists."—Henri Herz.

"I have looked over your twelve Etudes with lively interest. They are truly elegant a title which is most appropriate. Many of them are more than elegant, they are charming, cleverly constructed and have tasteful harmonies. Briefly, they are perfect and I can safely predict a great success."—Stephen Heller.

"I find the title of your Etudes Elégantes well justified, the brilliant passages, the attractive melodies and always refined harmonies, will crown your work with well deserved success."—Henri Ravina.

"You have succeeded in finding attractive melodies brilliant passages lying well under the hands and refined as well as original harmonies. With these qualities your studies cannot fail to obtain a great success to which I shall be happy to contribute."—Ch. Delioux.

"Your Etudes Elégantes is a work which for pupils is as pleasant as it is useful and is called in my opinion to occupy one of the best places in the Modern Pianoforte School."—A. Lavignac.

"My best congratulations to you on your excellent and useful work."—G. Pfeiffer.

"I have not the least doubt that the success of your Etudes Elégantes will respond to the object you had in view, viz. to interest the pupils by the graceful and melodious form of your studies whilst leaving to each its particular character of difficulty."—Ch. Neustedt.

"Without any restriction I must sincerely compliment you on your new Etudes I have carefully examined your work which I am recommending to my pupils as I know full well they will find there many things to cultivate their taste."—Francis Thome.

"I have just given a recital of your Etudes Elégantes and my only regret is that there are only twelve. There are some real gems amongst them."—Theodore Ritter.

"They are not only excellent studies of medium difficulty but delightful little pieces which will certainly be a great success."—Alfred Jaell.

"I can only send you my congratulations on the great success of your studies a success well deserved by the delightful, clever and most artistic style of your charming work."—Jules Massenet.

"Having given up my professorship I cannot contribute to make your Etudes Elégantes as widely known as they deserve but I cordially endorse the enthusiastic opinions expressed by our confreres."—F. Plante.

Your Etudes are truly graceful and very melodious. Their style and harmonies are most interesting. You may rely on me to make them known to my pupils."—A. Taléxy.
