GOLDEN HEARTED DAISIES

By ELIZABETH GORDON and W. R. WILLIAMS

Everybody loves flower songs and the most successful flower songs seem to be those about Daisies. With this in mind our popular writer, W. R. Williams, has been looking for a suitable lyric for years, and finally accepted "Golden Hearted Daisies," as being a little different and a little better than the rest. This lyric is by Elizabeth Gordon, quite a well known newspaper writer. Mr. Williams has set it to one of his most "singable" melodies and we predict this song will soon become one of the leading home favorites. If you enjoy a simple and at the same time a beautiful little song with a happy thought, poetically told, then you will send for a copy of

"Golden Hearted Daisies"

to-day. Whatever you do, do it now.

"WON'T YOU TRY TO LOVE ME"

"Won't You Try To Love Me"

Lyric by BETH SLATER WHITSON

(Just As I Love You)

Music by DEAN HOUGH BERDEAUX

Here's another beautiful lyric by Beth Slater Whitson, the girl who wrote the sensational song success "Meet Me Tonight in Dreamland."

This new one is set to a very charming melody by Dean Hough Berdeaux, and though a comparatively new writer, is already meeting with much success. This song is being featured by the best singers in Vaudeville, which insures a big sale.

"SWEETHEART OF MY DREAMS"

By WILL J. JONES and GUS KLEINECKE.

Seldom do we have in the popular song world one as musically good as this. It's a most remarkable song in that the lyric is so simple and pleasing that everyone can understand and appreciate it, and the melody is simply beautiful. It's refined and high-class in every way, and all in all

Peek-a-boo Mister Moon Peek-a-boo.

By MARVIN LEE and DONALD BESTOR

"Peek-a-boo Mister Moon Peek-a-boo"

Just as the name implies a dainty little novelty song that brings the bright smiles to the surface. A song that's charming and graceful both in themel and treatment, too, and one that was instantly adopted by the "stage folk." It's a song you should have in your home, and we hope you will put it on your list of immediate "wants."
