tle he brave-ly goes forth, To fight for his count-ry a ter from ov-er the sea But no! not a line or a gaze through the mist of her tears At her own dar-ling sol-dier boys lone When the boys and the girls gath-er round by the word She says that her son will be sure to come face But how dare we to tell her; her loved one is fire And the song and the mus-ic is heard A moth-er still back When the fight-ing is o'er in the spring And she thinks once a-dead And she'll meet him no more on this shore Neith-er clasp him a-mis-es the boy from her side And prays for her sol-diers re-turn.

gain she will have him be-neath The shelt-er-ing folds of her wing.
gain neath her shelt-er-ing wing And ne'er see his face an-y more.
