People's self interests prevent them from recognizing the monsters around them and within them until it is too late, because monsters come in many different disguises.

PETER ELIOT WEISS

For all its magnificence it is a society in chains. A society in chains breeds monsters out of air.

DR. VAN HELSING
(Going Down for the Count)

Sexuality seems to play a principal part in the pathogenisis of hysteria as a source of physical traumas and as a motive for defense - that is for repressing ideas from consciousness.

Going Down for the Count was first produced by Touchtone Theatre at the Firehall Theatre, Vancouver in 1985. It is one of Peter Eliot Weiss's first plays. He is renowned for his precedent-setting soap opera West End, and for Sex Tips for Modern Girls, currently being staged world-wide. Weiss's Haunted House Hamlet was a critical success at the Festival d'Ameriques in Montreal last year.
