Allegro moderato e Pomposo

The brig- and of the days of old; Was a scow- ling, prow- ling,

The brig- and of a by- gone time; Was a skulk- ing, hulk- ing, min- ion! From razors and from soup ex- empt; He spurned a bath with row- dy,

His un- ro- man- tic at- mos- phere you rec- og- nized when fine contempt. And scorned the world's opinion, He scorned the world's opinion, He came near, In dress he was a dowdy, In dress he was a dowdy. His largeness was never grand, The pettiest of banity; And he drank and smoked uncouthly joked, and he

REFRAIN

Now ev'-ry man is a Brig-and more or less, Tho' his trade's not High-way rob-ber-y; It's "busi-ness" they say, Till he gets found out some day, When they call it graft or job-ber-y. Tho' my meth-ods might per-chance Be looked on a bit ask-ance By the squeamish sen-ti-men-tal men; Still I love the pleas-ing thought, that a brig-and, till he's caught, May be — May May be a perfect gentleman, May be a perfect gentleman.

Piu Allegro e deciso

And I'd

be much mortified, If my claim should be denied To rank as a perfect gentleman. As a perfect gentleman. perfect gentleman.
