fell in love as most young fellows do;
should he dare to stop the swing, she'd sigh;
church one morning they stood side by side;

Reg'lar ev'ry Thursday afternoon,
"Keep the pot a-boiling, there's a dear!"
And
At the wedding breakfast later on,

call upon his sweetheart, Lucy Loo.
Once more Lucy's toot-sies flew on high.
Body missed the bridegroom and the bride.

In the garden he would find her, Seated on a quaint old swing;
All the young men 'round about there, On the garden walls would climb;
All the party went to find them, In the garden by and by.

With true love's devotion, He'd set the swing in motion,
And with eager faces, They'd glance at frills an' laces,
But soon they stopped seeking, The dear old swing was creaking.

And his Luc-y dear, would sing: As she warbled all the time:
And they heard the sweet bride sigh:
Swing me just a little bit higher, Obadiah.

Swing me just a little bit higher, and I'll love you; Tie me on and I'll never fall,

Swing me over the garden wall, Just a little bit higher, Obadiah, do!... do!

There's Not Another Girlie.
Words by WILLIAM JEROME
Chorus.
From the Successful Musical Comedy "LOLA FROM BERLIN."
Music by JEAN SCHWARTZ

There's not another girlie in the world like you,
There's not another girlie half as fond and true;
They may have teeth as pearly, And eyes as brightly blue, Still there's not another girlie in the world like you. There's you.
