And Still They Fall In Love

Words by AL. DUBIN
Music by JOE BURKE

Moderato

Now, when you talk of wed-lock It really makes me grin,
Now, married life is foolish, From my own point of view,
A year of strife and you'll wish You'd never seen it through;
They say we're all intended To live in harmony,

theory is splendid, But in reality:
found one or the other Is always in reverse.

REFRAIN

He'll go out and gamble, he'll go out and drink, She will stay at home beside the kitchen sink,

And still they fall in love! He'll be so polite, but after they are wed, He'll be eating peanuts every night in bed, And still they fall in love!

Oh, how dif-f'rent lov-ers are

When the knot is tied,
He pre-fers a good ci-gar,
To his dar-ling

bride;
She will mur-mur "Sweet-heart, whi-ther shall we fly?"
He will soft-ly say "Oh,

go lay down and die!"
And still they fall in love!
