"A thing of beauty is a joy forever"
—Keats

Beautiful music adds grace, charm, and zest to life. The thematics of the three songs below are merely a suggestion of the joys to be found in their complete piano scores.

For melodic loveliness, "Bells Across The Meadow" by Albert W. Ketelby can be compared only to the composer's two other world famous compositions "In A Monastery Garden" and "In A Persian Market."

We parted here in the shadows,
The sun was in the west:
Alone in the twilight we stood, you and I,
While chapel bells softly were ringing,

When darkness steals o'er the meadows
And all the world's at rest,
Oh, that was the hour you whispered, "Good-bye,"
To Avalon and me.

REFRAIN
I hear the bells of Avalon Reminding me that you are gone. Another day has travelled on into a night of dreams; You gave me a memory, then you wandered on; I wonder if you hear the bells, my dear, The Bells of Avalon? I lon?
