By the Light of the Jungle Moon

Words by
POWELL J. FORD

Music by
J. CALDWIN ATKINSON

Andante moderato

When the jungle trees are swaying,
Listen to the awful clatter.

Bending to the breezes, playing, After the sun goes down,
Monkeys wonder what's the matter, There goes a monkey lad.

Little monkey eyes are gleaming, little monkey hearts are dreaming, Down in Jungle
Crashing through the jungle branches, close behind him taking chances, Comes Miss Monkey's town.
Every eye is turned toward the eastern sky, They're Dad.
Seems as if her angry Papa saw him kiss her.

Watching for the jungle moon, While the old man tries to find him,
Watching for its beams of yellow,
And he means to catch him soon,

When the jungle moon is mellow, That's the time when monkeys like to spoon.
Monkey boy will steal behind him, Back where sweet Miss Monkey waits to spoon.

CHORUS
Tempo di Schottische

By the light of the jungle moon, In the tree-tops above, Mon-ke-y boy sings a loving tune to his own turtle dove, And he whis-pers "Sweet Mon-ke-y Maid, won't you come out and spoon? Here's where the bliss is, Come get your kis-ses, By the light of the jungle moon! By the moon!"
