Allegro moderato

On the Twentieth Century
At Buffalo they

Limited train has a Porter man named Daniel Lane
Who had a wreck and poor Dan nearly broke his neck

led a double life, At each end he had a wife news his wives both heard And thought that he was dead

CHORUS

He's my Dan, My Pullman porter man! He's the high Magul and Czar Of a Pullman palace car.

Long the line, just see his buttons shine, I'm swelled all up because I know he's mine.

Pullman Porter Man. 4 bid good-bye to num-ber one say-ing “Good-ness, How_ I'll both packed up and jumped on trains to view their loved one's miss you, hont! Then go to num-ber two And swear that he'd been last re-mains. They reached his side next day While in a trance he ture. His wife, out in Chi-ca-go, sat a sing-ing all day lay; The doc-tor said "who is this man, now please i-den-ti-long, While in New York his oth-er wife would sing the same old song.

fy?" Then both his wives look down at Dan and both be-gan to cry.
From his trips he brings home all his tips, He just lays down his grips And puck-ers up his lips, In the ev'-nin' he says "Good night chic. In the morn-in' How de-do N. Y." He's some 'fast man' my Pull-man For-ter Dan. Dan.
