man in the moon, On a seat in the park they will nothing to fear, For you know all is fair, she won't sit after dark With no one to see how they frighten you there By the cry, "Oh, don't mother is spoon! With her head on his breast, Now you know all the tear!" There's no gas to put out, And no father to rest, For I'm sure that you all have been there, shout, "Mary, is that young man going soon?"

And you know how it feels, The sensation that If the girl's heart is true, She will nestle to steals round your heart, Well it's nice, I declare you and make love, by the light of the moon!

moon's pale light, On a starry night, With the girl you love, your sweet turtle dove, And no-one in sight Then you steal a kiss Oh, what joy what bliss!

And you sigh and you tease, And you cuddle and squeeze By the moon's pale light! In the light!
